Lombart; added engraved titlepage, maps, and plans by Wenceslaus Hollar. Modern brown half-leather with brown cloth; gilt lettering and trim on the spines. Darlow-Moule, 1446. This is the fourth and last of the great Renaissance polygot Bible editions and is considered the most accurate of the group. Ethiopic and Persian were added here for the first time. Over two dozen textual editors participated in the undertaking. The actual printing began in 1653; but the second volume bears the colophon date of 1655. The final volume was finished late in 1657. This set has the so-called "loyal" Restoration preface (Leaf C2v of the "Praefatio"), in which the duty-free paper for the edition is mentioned (but not Cromwell's part in facilitating that favor to Thomas Roycroft). FUNDAMENTAL LEXICON IN THE FIRST EDITION

133. Facciolati, Jacopo and Egidio Forcellini. Totius latinitatis lexicon. Consilio et cura Jacobi Facciolati, opera et studio Aegidii Forcellini. Padua: typis Seminarii, apud Joannem Manfrè, 1771. 4 volumes complete, large folio full-leather with gilt trim and leather spine labels, marbled endpapers and marbled edges, library bookplate inside the front covers. The leather along the front hinge of the first volume is cracked, otherwise a very nice copy of this scarce lexicographical undertaking. FIRST EDITION. Facciolati (1682-1769) and Forcellini (1688-1768) were both philologists and lexicogra-phers at Padua, the latter being the student and later collaborator of the former. Forcellini spent forty years reading all of the Latin classical writers, plus studying inscriptions, coins, and medals, in order to accumulate the Latin vocabulary included in this monumental enterprise. Their editorial work on a 1719 “Calepinus” had convinced them of the need for a totally new Latin lexicon. The result offered here is the foundation of all modern Latin dictionaries. $1,500.00
